INTRODUCTION.

The same plan and the same promises matured and executed in our previous volumes are here again fulfilled with this volume.

under one cover the published rolls of the Rhode Island Soldiers of the Revolution which we here present in this work. Judge Cowell in 1850 published the "Spirit of '76," but; as we have stated elsewhere he did not give an index to the names and so it was not as useful for ready reference as it would have been with one. This neglect was his one great error or omission, but readers were not so much in a hurry in his day as they are in ours, hence a good excuse. We have taken the names the judge gives and added the military note to each and gave also before the name the page of "Spirit of '76," in which the same could be found; yet gave the note so full that the reader knows exactly what it reads, and hence refers for abpublishing this list and we only regret he did not commence to gather his notes earlier in life and had also kept copies of rolls from which he was forced to part for business purposes. My admiration for his work has been my excuse for indexing and publishing the index so formed in this work.

The census of 1820, a meagre affair, and yet considered of importance enough to warrant re-arranging under one alphabet and so placing before the reader at a glance the name sought for.

The census of 1840 was another list we have so treated.

Hence the matter given in these two census are also given in our copy.

The Government List of 1835 is a grand one and gives the full particulars and the amount paid on the pension for three years, in most cases. A few, however, show a longer term, the most striking of them those of Colonels Israel Angell and William Barton.

These four lists contain names common to more than one which is most excellent for confirmation proof.

The works from which they are taken are very rare and many librarians have no knowledge of their existence. To purchase the set will cost the reader at least one hundred dollars. Judge Cowell's work is quoted the lowest, and this from want of knowledge on the part of the appraiser and not from the real worth of the work. Even this work is held higher than we place our volume's price. We make this explanation to show the reader that he has a value in our work even if these lists have been before published.

We want also to combat a feeling among certain men who think themselves, and so style themselves, scholars who discourage reprints and really seem to think another should have no chance to purchase or own a rare work. We believe in the most liberal use of the printing art in way of bookmaking, and we believe the re-print of our standard works in various fields of literature has been the lever that has raised the standard of our civilization.

Again with the fancy prices asked for many of the first editions of standard works it is beyond the means of many who would cheerfully purchase a copy at a popular price. I know this fact from my own personal knowledge and so severely that I am pleased to get even a re-print, if it is understood, it is not abridged, and if different from former copies it is in additional notes and corrected matter.

We have published the Deaths and Marriages from the Newport Mercury previous to 1800, and also those of the Newport Herald. We commence the publication of the Providence Journal deaths and publish 1820–1830 from A to R, the remainder of which, together with that of the marriages, will be given in a future publication.

In these publishments we have retained all the facts stated in the original copy. We do this to make these items more interesting as well as more valuable. Without being again critical we think those publishments of these matters where the dates only are given is poor policy and seriously damages the value of the work done. I have in hand now to illustrate which I will quote here, using only another set of names. It is given in the re-print thus.

Doe, John, Jan. 22, 1825.

Doe, John and Mary Howe, Dec. 6, 1814.

Doe, Helen, 7y 5m, Dec. 17, 1830.

In the original it was stated:

Doe, John, son of William, Jan. 22, 1825.

Doe, John, of Edward and Mary Howe, of widow Howe, Dec. 6, 1814.

Doe, Helen, daughter of John, aged 7y 5m, Dec. 17, 1830.

In our copy we gave all these facts regretting that not more was given, hence the reader when he glances at our copy knows he gets all the facts even if he does not get the exact words. The gist is not abridged in any case. Again we hold constantly before the reader the source of our information. The reader will agree that he can realize more satisfaction from our copy than the first given and he sees he has the original authority before him to refer to in our case while in the other he has lost it.

We have been charged that in giving our source of information so constantly we have cheapened our work. To this charge we leave the reader to smile or frown as he pleases. Our excuse is we want to know on what authority the statement rests and presume the reader would like also to know.

We have published enough of our serial for the reader to get acquainted with our methods and familiar with our plan. We have not piaced ourselves outside of the usual paths to be odd but have got out to make a straighter path. Our study has been to make our reader understand us. Anything to confuse we have thrown aside. Brevity, clearness, and a desire to be of real use and assistance to him has been our constant study from the first and will be in the future.

We are pleased to note that the later publications in our line of work have followed more or less in our footsteps, which encourages us in the belief that we have been of some use and value to real scholars.

It is with real pleasure that we again record the General Assembly of our State has been pleased to again stand by the work, and further that all of our old friends are still with us and the new ones are still increasing in numbers. This encourages us to believe that our work has sterling merits of its own.

As will be seen by a perusal of our pages no pains has been spared in order to avoid all ambiguity. The prime object of the Compiler was to so arrange the matter here presented that no one need be a professional reader to thoroughly understand it at a glance. We close with our usual admonition: That the reader may be profited, instructed and rewarded for his labor and time while perusing our pages, is the earnest and sincere wish of the compiler.

THE NEWPORT MERCURY.

Marriages and Deaths Published Previous to January 1, 1800.

The Mercury was the second paper founded in this colony, having been preceded by the Rhode Island Gazette whose first number bore date of September 27, 1732. The Gazette was discontinued the next year.

The Mercury was established by James Franklin, the younger, who issued the first number June 12, 1758. Franklin died in 1762 and his mother, Ann Franklin, published the paper until her death in 1763. Samuel Hall, son-in-law of James Franklin, then assumed charge. In 1768 the paper passed into the hands of Solomon Southwick, a Whig and patriot. When the British entered Newport he buried his press and went to Albany, N. V. After the evacuation he returned and on June 5, 1780, issued the first number of the Mercury under the proprietorship of Southwick & Barber. Since this date it has never missed a number, although it has had a number of proprietors.

The first font of type was presented to Franklin by his uncle, Benjamin. The press upon which the paper was printed was brought from England in 1717 and was the first press upon which Benjamin Franklin worked. This press was a "Ramage" and remained in the Mercury office until 1859, when it was sold to John B. Murray of New York. This gentleman presented it to the Massachusetts Mechanics Association and it is still in their possession at Boston. After Southwick had buried the press in the yard at the rear of the Kilburn House on Broad Street, a Tory, familiar with the facts and with the locality, gave information to the British, who immediately dug up the press and type and continued the weekly issues of the paper during the three years of their occupancy of the place.

THE NEWPORT HERALD.

Marriages and Deaths from March 1, 1787.

The Newport Herald was established by Peter Edes, who published it for three years, 1787 to 1790. It was an intermittent publication, whose political object was to oppose the issue of Paper Money.

Peter Edes was born in Boston, Mass., Dec. 17, 1756, died in Bangor, Me., ——, 1840. He had been in partnership with his father; had resided in Newport, R. I., Augusta, Hallowell, and Bangor, Me.

At the time of the Revolution General Gage ordered his arrest "for having firearms concealed in his house." Two days after the Battle of Bunker Hill, he was thrown into prison, where he remained three months. His Journal, kept during his confinement, is still in the hands of his family. A word respecting his father and family, will not be amiss here:

Benjamin Edes, born Charlestown, Mass., Oct. 14, 1732, died at Boston, Dec. 11, 1803, son of Peter and Esther of Charlestown, and in descent the fourth generation from John of Charlestown, who was born in Lawford, County Essex, England, March 31, 1651. Benjamin was a member of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company, 1760, and styled Captain. He was also a member of the Sons of Liberty.

In his Printing Office in Queen, now Court, Street, many of the Boston Tea Party disguised themselves, and on their return did justice to the punch served in a punch bowl still preserved in his family (1875). He established the Boston Gazette and Country Journal, at Boston, in 1755, in company with John Gill, and edited it for 43 years until it was discontinued. In politics it was Whig. Otis, Samuel and John Adams, Quincy and Warren, contributed to its columns. Governor Bernard, advocated in a letter to Lord Hills-

COWELL'S "SPIRIT OF '76."

An Analytical and Explanatory Index.

Juige Ben amin Cowell, the action of this week, which was published by him in 1850, was born in Wrentham, Mass., in 1781, and one land Provincia v. R. J. May 6, 18 for the grant fed from Brown University in the class of 1863. He studied law and settled in Providence. For a long term he was pension attorney for this district. During this long term he became acquainted with many of the old soldiers and he could, from his large mass of anecdote and collections, have produced several very interesting volumes. The partial list he published was perhaps an afterthought with him in late life for, had he commenced with his first practice with the object in view of publishing later, he would have had an immense manuscript which to-day would be priceless. The partial list he published was not arranged so that a reader, and more particlarly one who was anxious to know whether a certain name was in his book or not, could find it without a weary search. In brief his work was utterly destitute of an index of any nature whatever.

Judge Cowell's style was that of a lawyer and hence his work carries their ear-marks. Had he systematized his notes he would have added much beauty to his work, from a literary point of view. These notes, however, coming as they do from a lawyer, are the more valuable and reliable as they are the facts as clearly as he could obtain them.

At the time of the compilation of this work by Judge Cowell, an index was not regarded as essential as it is to-day, so that, while the omission was excusable in his day, it would not be excusable now.

With all these defects the work still has sterling merits. The large mass of valuable information contained therein has only to be properly indexed to be made useful, and of great value to one who is searching for this kind of historical information. The copy

The reader should bear in mind that when the same name as that of his grand, or great-grand-ather appears in this list, it may indicate his service, or that of another of the same name. To clinch the proof other evidence must be obtained. Again, there may be several of the same name who served at different times in different places. The reader, therefore, should carefully verify the facts herein given with other authorities.

That the reader may be instructed and interested in the perusal of this index is the earnest wish of the compiler.

In the introductory portion of Judge Cowell's work will be found several biographical sketches of the Rhode Island officers of the Revolution.

The Rhode Island Pensioners, 1840.

In the Act creating the taking of the Sixth Census of the United States was a clause requiring the Marshal to take separate account of the Pensioners. The government printers the next year (1841) published this list in a volume bearing the title of "A Census of Pensioners for Revolutionary or Military Services; with their names, ages and places of residence, as returned by the Marshals of the several Judicial Districts, under the Act for taking the Sixth Census. Published under an Act of Congress, under the direction of the Secretary of State."

This list is grouped by towns and counties without any regard to an alphabetical order. If we counted the Rhode Island list correctly there were 599 of them. In the list the matter is grouped in three columns, the first carrying the name only, the second the age, and the third the name of the head of the family in which the pensioner resides. Many of these carried the pensioner's own name repeated. Where this was the fact we did not repeat it, where another's name is given it is mentioned in every instance. The time of the residence is given as June 1, 1840, and we suppose the year to be given as referring to 1840. The town is inserted immediately following the age of the pensioner.
